Communicating with Devas and Elementals and Dowsing the Differences Between Them

Unity Center, Mills River NC

April 25, 2009

Of all the nature beings that choose to communicate with humans, Devas are the easiest to begin with, and pave the way for more rapid development of other intuitive skills. Eager in their desire to communicate with humans, they are quick to approach all who encourage them to come near.

Unlike the Devas, the Elemental and Faerie Kingdom is composed of many individuals that are not trusting of humans until they have proven themselves. In deep love with this planet and all her physical manifestations, of which they are the guardians, they will become fiercely loyal to all who offer sincere friendship.

In this lecture, you will be introduced to each of these realms through story, channeling and dowsing. Several styles of dowsing methods will also be demonstrated to assist you in distinguishing the differences between these nature beings, so bring your favorite dowsing tool. You can expect that a bevy of these beings, long waiting to talk with you, will accompany Creeksong to provide delightful illumination.

Danielle Creeksong has been in private practice for over 20 years. Her private sessions, in office or by phone, are most likened by her clients to transpersonal psychology, inspiring intuitive abilities while promoting personal growth. Creeksong also offers varied classes and workshops which frequently focus on understanding and developing a personal relationship with Devas and Elementals.

*President's CornerEarth Needs Our Help

By Paul Bennett

The energy level at our Feb. 21 meeting was amazing! So peaceful and light, considering the number of people present. Of course, that many persons presents logistical problems which we hope to alleviate next time, now that we know what the problems are. But all in all it went fairly well for the first time in the new location. The feedback is consistently about 10 to 1 in favor of keeping the afternoon format – the feeling is that way you don't end up with wasted food, it gives people time in the morning, and some people have a long way to drive. So we're planning to stay with that, but with more time before the program for socializing (see page 4 for the new times). We will try to have a social every month that doesn't have a meeting. Also, the basic dowsing class will last longer.

* * * * *

A few of our members are sensitive enough that they can directly feel the suffering of Earth under the onslaught of terrain disruption and paving, tree removal, mining, toxic dumping, river diversions, water and air pollution, and climate warming. And they have been sensing that the time is right for a little earth healing, in certain local spots as well as globally.

And so maybe it's time to form a subgroup of the dowsers, to focus on appropriate local or worldwide attention to Earth's wounds. As dowsers and intuitives we have the power to heal the earth. There are angelic forces who can help, and they are waiting for our requests. They won't do it on their own. They might not even be able to do it without our help.

And down at ground level, it is necessary to gain the trust of the elementals and work with them. Some of us (not me, yet) are able to see and communicate with the earth elementals – the faeries, gnomes, elves and trolls, and the water sprites and undines, and the sylphs in the wind. These presences, and the devas that oversee their work, are responsible for imparting life energy to the flora and fauna. They maintain the balance in all of nature. The faeries and all the elementals are struggling now under the weight of all the disregard for earth's purity. Earning their trust is not always easy but is needed for cooperation.

Western North Carolina is blessed with beautiful and sacred terrain. There are a lot of energies in these hills. Many places in WNC have been damaged and are in need of healing. In Asheville, the high point in the town center where the monument is situated is an energy portal, and it has been disrupted by the nearby construction work. There are other power sites around town that need attention as well.

Marko Pogacnik is probably the most experienced teacher when it comes to earth healing. In his book "Healing the Heart of the Earth" he develops a few guiding principles: Always respect earth's own healing process – what seems like a wound may be the earth healing itself. This may even include the extinction of species. Purity of intention is key; we must not engage in earth healing in a mental state of guilt, or as an ego booster. We do not act out of a state of fear of possible earth catastrophes. We do not command healing out of a position of domination, we request it in an attitude of respect for Earth and its cycles. We check with the nature intelligences first – is it appropriate at this time? We seek guidance from higher sources that are known to represent truth – but balanced and checked by our own inner intuition.

And Pogacnik feels is vitally important that any healing work be public and result in a societal shift in attitudes. Standing stones, for example, serve a dual purpose: they can bring energy into the earth grid, and they also make the healing intention very visible. Ceremony and ritual is a powerful and quite visible tool, especially when large numbers of people are involved.

There are a number of healing methods available. Placing standing stones over ley lines and power points is a form of Earth acupuncture. Sound, in the form of chanting and toning, can send energy into the earth. First sound tones that reflect the disturbance, then gradually change to harmonizing sounds. Rhythmic dancing or drumming, color visualizations, and group imagery/visualization are all powerful, especially combinations of these.

Our power includes guiding the weather patterns for beneficial purposes. Olympia Freeman's Rain Circle is a circle of persons in western NC and upstate SC who are willing to recite a short intention (which she will send you) every Monday to manifest rain or snow in our area. Along with the statement, you visualize rain gently falling on the landscape. Her feeling is that a number of people praying for rain on the same day, in the same way, has more power than the same number acting alone. To participate, send a note to soulsmidwife@soulsmidwife.com.

Farewell to an Old Friend

By Richard Crutchfield

It's never easy to bid farewell to a close friend, especially the faithful and wiser ones, the "old timers" we call them. For dowsers it's no different, perhaps even more so, since they are not only our dear friends but our mentors, our examples of devotion and service to humanity – which, after all, represents our very purpose for being dowsers and coming together as a community.

Such was the case with an old friend and dowsing enthusiast, Ed Zane, of Waynesville, who, after a long bout with cancer, embarked early this November on the Sacred Voyage we all know about. There he no doubt chose to join the beloved Ancestral Spirits our indigenous friends tell us about. We know he did because we know Ed. He was that kind of a guy. Service, Love and intense interest in everything we were doing – and had ever done – were written all over his face, even in his pain, as he entered for the last time one of our 2008 meetings in Leicester. I will never forget that radiant, courageous face, that moment of truth when he felt the excitement of being among friends again.

As far as I know Ed wasn't a dowser, though he may have experienced one of our classes. But he loved our energy, the work of healing and what we are about. His wife Alice, one of the most dedicated, courageous and well informed researchers in alternative medicine I have ever known, was no doubt a great inspiration to him as well. Dowsers need the support, energy and friendship of people like the two of them. We will miss him greatly and wish Alice the best for her journey. For both of them, only gratitude.

To Your Health

Inflammation

By Margery Bastian

The inflammation response is a basic mechanism of our immune system. But it is dangerous to have too much. It is not ok to have inflammation consistently, as your checks and balances of your immune system can't take care of the inflammation. Chronic inflammation will gradually destroy the balances among our major systems, like endocrine, central nervous system, digestive, cardiovascular and respiratory. It can create health issues with one or more of these body systems.

A mosquito bite, a mild sunburn, or a tiny splinter can trigger the immune system to send cells and natural chemicals to destroy germs and repair the damage. As a result the area becomes inflamed. Inflammation happens so often, that people don't notice it. It also occurs, not only on the skin, but internally too, when viruses invade the body or the stomach is irritated. It is the body's way of protecting itself.

However, inflammation can harm the very tissues it is meant to heal. Its destructive side has long been evident in rheumatoid arthritis, in which inflammation cripples the joints, and multiple sclerosis, in which it destroys the insulation surrounding nerve fibers.

With more alternative doctors, and this includes some Western medical doctors, will now look at the root cause being inflammation. Especially concerning allergies, irritable bowel syndrome, inflammatory bowel disease and rheumatoid arthritis. They are also considering heart disease, obesity and Alzheimer's as possibly being included in this group.

People on prescription drugs over a long period of time may see their health deteriorate. The pharmaceutical drugs don't heal the underlying cause of the inflammation. When they stop taking the medication, the symptoms return.

In Chinese medicine, they know and work with these systems communicating and responding with each other. With inflammation this communication stops. In conventional medicine they seldom look at this as a base importance to the underlying cause.

The Chinese look at the fact that there is too much fire in the body from internal and external sources of heat. At first the imbalance manifests as an aversion to heat, skin eruptions and bowel disturbances. Some times the skin looks red and flushed. Over time the condition will affect the small intestine and the heart. The inflammation can move to any place in the body.

The best is always a combination of Western and Eastern medicine. The development of inflammatory disease began as an imbalance of some kind, often one that had its beginnings in a digestive disorder. At this time there is no direct test for inflammation. The best test to do is C-reactive protein, a pro-inflammatory marker in the blood, and homocysteine, a test for checking the irritating blood acid.

Now scientists are realizing that inflammation may underlie many other common chronic diseases that come with aging, including atherosclerosis, diabetes, Alzheimer's and osteoporosis. It is also implicated in asthma, cirrhosis of the liver, psoriasis, meningitis, cystic fibrosis and even cancer.

Lifestyle choices to reduce inflammation

Nutrition: In America, it is next to impossible to get the right amount of nutrients on a daily basis without a supplement. Taking the right supplements and eating foods rich in anti-inflammatory compounds like flavanoids will help with chronic inflammation.

Physical exercise: It releases endorphins into the blood that act as a natural anti-inflammatory. Most people with inflammation condition finds more relief when they exercise. Exercise lowers CRP, regulates insulin levels and creates muscle. Exercise along with deep breathing, like yoga, walking, tai chi, and Pilates has made a great difference. If dieting and have high inflammation, toxins are stored in fat cells, burning that fat releases those toxins. You may feel awful during this time, but the feeling is temporary. So, during this time especially, work on detoxing your body.

Habits: Smoking, excessive alcohol, recreational drug use and caffeine incite free radicals. Smoking raises your levels of CRP. Cocaine and marijuana use have been shown to accelerate atherosclerosis. It is good to remember that our body reacts to foreign substances as intruders to be wiped out, which sends the immune system into overdrive.

“Critter Corner” by Kate PittmanBack to the Basics, Mom, PLEASE!

Most animals within a species are distinct individuals, who, like their human counterparts, have their own specific personalities, strengths, quirks, potentials, likes and dislikes. Over-generalizing and categorizing specific attributes as “cat-like, dog-like, hawk-like, etc.” never fails to get me into trouble when dowsing about and in communicating with non-human beings – and humans too, come to think of it. There are a not a lot of broad generalizations that my experience shows are safe to make. We do safely make some, though, for instance: birds living in the wild have little desire for prolonged conversation. Their worlds are fairly fast moving and much of their energy is spent on personal survival and reproduction to expand their family tree. Unless these feathered critters have accepted the protection of humans in a fairly long-term or permanent rehabilitation situation where care is both guaranteed and desired by them, most conversations will be terse and to-the point. Another example is just how different the wild birds communication style is from the way a pampered canine family member will often converse. Some pups can go on for a very long time about minutia related, for instance, to what they enjoyed specifically about all the smells noticed on their last outing.

Domesticated cats are more apt than canines to exhibit certain specific behaviors in response to differing situations that are bothersome to them. Regardless of the reason contact is needed, many felines get right to the point when needing human attention and/or intervention. I can’t count the number of calls I have received asking for help because Kitty is not using the litter box, but instead using dining room rugs, laundry baskets full of clean wash, and especially human bedding (often the fluffiest bed pillows) for elimination purposes. Kitty knows how to get our attention very quickly, even though sometimes their choice of method exacts a stiff price for them. I’m sure several of you with cats in the family know about the universal alarm system often used by our bewhiskered friends.

Thanks to the increasing acceptance of animal communication we are now able to get to the heart of problems more quickly and negotiate alternative alarm behaviors from our friends. Dowzers have a little extra in our bag of helpful tricks. When Kitty has “manifested a message of discontent” in a totally unacceptable place we can quickly dowse to chat with the offending critter. We can also dowse information from a less biased source than the critter his/herself also by dowsing about them. Wherever we dowse the information from, we are able to investigate causes, remedies and future potentials concerning problems that arise. It is tremendously heartwarming to hear of so many of you who are now augmenting other forms of communication with dowsing skill.

There is, however, a snag that we need to address and happens for many people while dowsing/intuiting on behalf of critters. Let’s expand the inappropriate Kitty example from above. We will assume somebody in the dowsing/intuitive community has contacted me about Kitties recent fondness of leaving unexpected messages.

“Kate, I’m at my wits end. Whiskers won’t use her litter box, but wets on the couch instead. No matter what we do.... Help! I know she is trying to get my attention, but I’ve dowsed about her and talked with her, but all this doesn’t change things. I don’t want to lock her into the garage, but what can I do?”

By the end of our work together on behalf of Whiskers I’ve been told that: Whiskers must be angry because we left town for a weekend without telling her, Whiskers is annoyed by the white dog that comes into the yard every day, Whiskers needs a spiritual clearing, Whiskers litter box needs a spiritual clearing, Whiskers forgets where the litter box is, Whiskers wants a play mate, In a past life Whiskers was royalty and able to do anything she wanted, Whiskers overheard me telling a friend that “I’ve had it with this cat!”, Whiskers needs crystals around her favorite chair Etc. etc. etc.

All of these ideas may have been dowsed about by Whiskers’ human and still no end of Whiskers’ behavior is in sight.

Many human assumptions based on human frames of reference have been made, but still the human needs a little help helping Whiskers by discovering the real problem and solution.

What would have simplified the quest from the beginning would have been a quick method to determine the nature of the cause of Whiskers' behavior. An appropriate starting place in this investigation would have been the following questions:

What is the nature of the cause of Whiskers' inappropriate wetting on our sofa?

Is it: a physical cause?

Is it: an emotional cause?

Is it: an intellectual cause?

Is it: a spiritual cause?

Is it: more than one of these four causes?

Quickly our normal human assumptions can be eliminated by answering the questions above. When following the dowsing trail for Whiskers based on those questions, it was determined in under five minutes that the cause was found only in the Physical quadrant. All assumptions about past lives, neighborhood dogs, nasty energies, missing humans, etc. could be abandoned. Many times the physical behavior Whiskers displayed is actually caused by urinary track infections or abnormalities. Unfortunately though, extra discomfort is often endured by a lot of cats and time wasted by making assumptions and following convoluted dowsing paths based on our own frames of reference and biased assumptions. Sometimes our biases extend to an overall disregard for any treatments or diagnoses based on current veterinary practices. In actuality, we have a wonderful gift given us. Dowsing can actually help us determine what holistic modality (including many western medical practices) is appropriate and when which is in the best interest of our critters, despite our own belief systems.

It's amazing how many seemingly spiritual or emotional problems end up being physical in origin. It is equally amazing to me how many seemingly physical problems end up being caused by the spiritual, emotional, and or intellectual. When we assume things in a dowsing quest, we abandon a necessary detachment from the outcome that gives us accuracy. As always, we are but conduits for answers to questions and need to get out of our own way. Try to get back to the basics, no matter how counter intuitive it may seem, by asking the very basic questions at the start of a quest. And, if you have a problem with Kitty that resembles that of Whiskers, don't despair if you are too close to the problem to dowse accurately. Instead, consider checking with your Kitty's medical professional first. Then you can comfortably explore other potential causes, knowing you have done everything needed to ensure Kitty's good health before exploring other causes. Relief in having done that may help give you the needed distance from the problem and you could be able to dowse other possible causes more accurately.

Enjoy your critters, be kind to each other, and please assume there is a better person to call than me should your Kitty be leaving you unwanted messages. If in doubt about that last part... well ... just dowse it.

Kate Pittman is a dowser, intuitive and animal communicator. She lives in Haywood County.

Finding Your Own Truth by C.S. McCall

In 2008 I began dowsing and over the next year I began to find my own truths by means of my new spiritual back up called dowsing. I was born a natural clairvoyant and clairaudient. But the dowsing rods have added a dimension to my spirit communication.

I take my dowsing rods and pendulum everywhere I travel. On a plane trip to Europe I asked the elementals to grant us all safe passage to our destination. I then saw our plane surrounded by beings who took us safely across the ocean.

In Europe I visited Germany and I stayed in former East Berlin. Late in the evening on the second night I was visited by dozens of spirit individuals who wanted to communicate with me about what had happened to them in their life and they wanted to know if I could help them. They put on a fine show of lights and images of what they looked like and their names. I was very excited to meet them.

I had to get some sleep. As I went to get into bed I looked down and saw the impression of a child's hand form upon the once smooth sheets of my bed. Seeing the child's hand was heart breaking. I blessed them all and asked the universe to find them what they needed and then I went to sleep.

My rods confirmed to me again the next morning what had happened. These were people who had died during the war in Germany. There were wives, mothers, grandfathers and little children. I saw them in bursts of vision many times during the rest of the trip.

Since the year has passed I have become more sensitive to energies such as using the body as a dowsing tool and seeing energetic fields around organic and inorganic objects. I could walk down the hallway at school and feel buzzing when I used my rods. They identified the earth energies coming up from the ground. I could use my hands to feel the buzzing. I did not need my rods. I was the rod. I got shocks from my computer mouse and was nauseated by the end of the day. I began to wear crystals and take salt baths in order to not feel sick. A clairvoyant friend of mine said my experiences were not EMF poisoning, but an increase in psychic ability because focusing in dowsing was opening up channels. Who Knew!

During a dowser social at my home Richard Crutchfield, Sam Richardson, Kate Pitman, and Paul Bennett, all experienced dowsers, taught me to cloak the energies when I needed to. I now use the mighty prayer of the four directions to call in the earth to reduce all non beneficial energies from becoming too intense. (this really works, I can feel the buzz decrease.)

As the second year and spring greened up the mountains my dowsing took another direction. Being a clairvoyant and seeing non-physical forms that live in my home and elsewhere was one thing, but I was very happy to find out that there are light beings in my back yard.

I had seen tree spirits before in the maples outside my window while I was building pottery in my studio. They have a specific energy when I get visual impressions about them. But one evening when I felt as though I should walk in my garden at about 10:00 pm I stood in the darkness and quietly thought, can we visit with you? I felt the chills gather along my spine and up my arms. This sensation is when energetic beings try to communicate by attaching to my nervous system. Sometimes you will see better or hear better or just have chills to let you know they are there. Many have felt this when they walk into a building and are aware of something and then have the chills. This is a form of communication.

When I softened my gaze, I quietly saw a gradual building of activity in every corner of the yard. No words were spoken; only lights danced and glowed. There were golden hues, intense neon blues and a set of red eyes that bounced over the back fence into a vegetable garden. There were geometric shapes, cylindrical bars in neon blue, and simple bouncing spheres of light. The shapes were not little humans but very diverse (there are human shaped ones though). It was like a sea of thousands of different shapes moving from the plants in the yard or to the trees. String like bodies with ball shapes on the ends that lighted in the butterfly bush. One light actually burst bright orange near my sons head. My rods later said these were elementals. As they crossed after I asked this, the chills magnified in my spine.

When people talk about human ghosts I am in disagreement that what they are finding with the EMF devices may be the detection of elementals rather than ghost/human thought forms. Some people think that globes are ghosts. Some nonphysical human form energetically is a different signature than elemental. Both are electric and both can be spherical but there is a difference.

When my son and I went on a ghost tour in Asheville we gathered photos of globes that the tour guide said were ghosts. When we got home I spent inordinate amounts of time photographing everywhere I could day and night to capture these globes. My rods say they are elementals. Sometimes they are barely visible without the camera. One of my dogs is afraid of them. Notice Gabby trying to lean to the right to avoid the globes in the picture. The globes will rush into the basement in the evening when I feed the dogs. Gabby will not go in the garage alone.

Get your digital and hit the back yard. You do not have to have clairvoyant sight, just snap a photo and I know you will find globes. I'm having fun being a dowser. For me enlightenment is in the journey.
